

Underfoot

On this unexpected path, the bones of the woods break through the packed-mud skin.

Nubs of time-smoothed trunks pit the ridge along which I walk, fold-footed, dressed in gold and red;

a wary geisha
upon the spine
of my inscrutable woodland emperor.